Advanced Placement Exams - information provided by The College Board:

- NO face to face exams will be given for 2020 AP courses/exams.
- Students will be given a shortened AP exam electronically/online directly from the College Board (45 minutes). They will still be able to earn college credit.
- Exams are currently being revised to cover only curriculum typically covered through early March of the school year (see College Board website for curriculum specifics for each course).
- Students will be able to choose from two test dates, one early for those who want to test while material is fresh, and one later for those who want more time to prepare.
- Test dates, more particulars about exam content, and details for the online testing process will be released by April 3 on the College Board website.
 - The College Board has released additional free remote learning resources for teachers and students (see College Board website). In addition, they will begin free, live, recordable AP review classes on March 25th.
